Many talk of Robin Hood, who never shot in his Tow.

[This Robin Hood was a famous Robber, and storied to be an expert Archer in the Time of Richard the First, about the Year 1200; his principal Haunt was about Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire.] This Proverb is applicable to all ignorant Pretenders and Braggadocio's, either in Knowledge or Business. It intimates, that Bragging and Boasting are common Impertinencies in Conversation, equally among Travellers and Soldiers, as well as Poets and Painters, who never out-did Nature yet, but only in the Lye. But they who pretend themselves to be what they are not, will always be prating about what they do not know. So, Non omnes qui Citbaram tenent, Citbarcedæ sunt, say the Latins; πολλοί μὲν ταρακχοφοί, παυροὶ δὲ τὸ σαυχοί, the Greeks; and Molti parlan di Orlando, cbi non widero mai suo brando, the Italians.

Robin Hood's Pennyworth.

This Proverb is usually applied to such as, having gotten any Thing dishonestly, sell it at a Price much below the Value, according to the Proverb, Lightly come, lightly go; and Robin Hood is alluded to, because, being an expert Archer, and so coming easily by it, he could afford to sell Venison as cheap as Neck Beef; according to the Latins, Aurea pro Æreis; and the Greeks, χρυσὴν χαλκίῳ. But others, on the contrary, apply it to such as would buy lumping Pennyworths, still alluding to Robin, but upon another Consideration, viz. his being a Robber; who, though as Cambden calls him Prædonem mitissimum, the most gentle and generous of Thieves, when Cash run low, would have what he wanted at his own Rate, which his Chapmen were forced to take, or else he would have it for nothing.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careless Groom, but has more extended Aim; it intimates, that it is mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumstances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event, to our great Shame and Damage. This is generally the Wisdom of the World, when the Thing is over, we are as wise as Experience can make us. Almost all the Miscarriages of Mankind are for want of thinking: Afterwit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Misfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foresight; an After-thought may enhance our Trouble, but cannot relieve our Distress; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but it cannot make any Satisfaction for what is past. Serrar la Stalla quando s'ban perduti buovi, say the Italians. Il est tems de fermer l'estable quand les Chevaux en sont allés, the French. Quando-quidem accepto claudendo est janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better steal a Horse than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not justify stealing at all; it means very honestly, and is only a smart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgment as publick Trials. It intimates, that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws against Oppression and Robbery in their own Hands, little Thieves only go to Pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are punished with Death or the Gallows, while great Offenders live safe and secure under the Helm of Government. This proverb is for doing all People Justice alike, from the Highest to the Lowest, and in all Cases whatsoever, either of Desert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age; Coxenizing is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler Way of stealing now than only to take a Man's Horse from under him on the Highway, and a little loose Money out of his Pocket; our Raparees are Men of better Breeding and Fashion, and scorn to play at such small Game, they sweep away a noble Estate with one slight Brush, and bid both the Gallows and Horse-pond Defiance; and the Mob is not always just in this Point, for one Pick-pocket deserves a Horse-pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Cloaths. But, Dat veniam Corvus, vexat censura Columbas, say the Latins.

He steals a Goose, and gives the Giblets in Alms.

This Proverb points at such Persons, who by Acts of Injustice, Oppression, and Fraud, amass to themselves large Estates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing some charitable Acts while they are alive, or when they can no longer possess them, by leaving their Lands in Mortmain to pious and charitable Uses, as building and endowing Hospitals, Almshouses, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Christian Charity); but they who think, by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly disparaging to the Justice of the Almighty. Parallel to this is the Hebrew Adage.

All the false, as well as foolish Conclusions, from a Particular to an Universal Truth, fall under the Censure of this Proverb. It teaches, that as he that guesses at the Course of the Year by the Flight of one single Bird, is very liable to be mistaken in his Conjecture; so that a Man cannot be denominated Rich from one single Piece of Money in his Pocket, nor accounted universally good from the Practice of one single Virtue, nor temperate because he is frugal, nor liberal because he is exactly just: That one Day cannot render a Man completely happy in Point of Time, nor one Action consummate his Glory in Point of Valour. In short, the Moral of it is, That the right Way of judging of Things, beyond Imposition and Fallacy, is not from Particulars, but Universals. Una Hirundo non facit ver, says Horace. Τὸ ἓκαστὸν χελιδὼν οὐ ποιεῖ, Aristotle, from whence we borrow it.

Well begun is half ended.

All the Actions and Enterprises of Mankind labour under the Reflection of this quaint moral Sentence, whether they be prudent or imprudent in the Undertaking, and good or bad in the Accomplishment. It intimates, that Persons should be very deliberate and advised in the Beginning of an Undertaking; for that to begin well is the only Way to quicken and dispatch the End, let it be what it will. It intimates, that there is a great deal of Difficulty in beginning well, and that a false Step at first Start is hardly to be recovered afterwards: that the Work does not cost half so much Trouble as the Design of it; that it is an easy Matter to make Way when the Ice is broke. A worldly Misfortune, if it quickens our Diligence and Industry; a severe Fit of Sickness, if it promotes our Piety, and makes us amend our Lives, is well; though for the present no Affliction seems joyous, but grievous; for a happy Death is the never-failing Portion of a well-spent Life, which always ends in eternal Bliss and Glory. The best Way of judging of Things beyond Mistake, is by the Issue or Event of them. Finis coronat opus, say the Latins; Ende wobl, alles wobl, say the Germans; and Αλαωδίας, ημισυς αἰών, the Greeks.

YEAR [gear, Sax. Jaer, Belg. Jahr, Teut.] the Time the Sun takes up in going through the 12 Signs of the Zodiac, which is either Astronomical or Civil; the former is also divided into Tropical and Syderial. And the Year is also Solar or Lunar.

The Natural Solar YEAR } is that Time

The Tropical Solar YEAR } which the Sun takes to go from one Point of the Ecliptick to the same again, and contains 365 Days 5 Hours and 12 Minutes.

The Sydeareal YEAR, is the Time the Sun takes in departing from any fixed Star, till it returns to the same again, and it contains 13 Months, or 52 Weeks, or 365 Days 6 Hours, and almost 10 Minutes; which odd Hours, in 4 Years Time, amounting to 24 or one whole Day, make that which is commonly called Bisextile and Intercalary.

The Civil YEAR, is that which is in common Use among Nations, being very various both as to its Beginning, and its Length, according as they follow the Course either of the Sun, or Moon, or both.

The Lunar YEAR, contains 12 Lunations or Synodical Months, and is less than the Solar by 11 Days, the exact Duration of it being 354 Days, 8 Hours, and 48 Minutes; so that its Head, in about 33 Years, will run through all the Months and Seasons of the Year; and this Kind of Year is now in Use among the Turks.

YEAR and a Day [in Common Law] is a Space of Time that determines Right in many Cases; in some implying a Usucaption, and in others a Prescription; as in Case of an Astray, if the Owner (after Proclamation made) does not challenge it within that Time it is forfeited.

The younger Brother the better Gentleman.

Though this Proverb contradicts their Notions, who think such Persons only the best Gentlemen, who had the largest Estates, and it being the Custom of England for the eldest Son to go away with the whole Patrimony, it may to them seem a Paradox; but as it is grounded on a different Notion, so there have been, and are plentiful Instances to confirm the Truth of it; for while the Elder Brother of a House, depending upon his Estate, is either indulged by Parents, or gives up himself to an indolent Humour, so that his Soul in his Body, like a Sword in the Scabbard, rusts for want of Use, thinking it sufficient, if he have only the Accomplishments of a Fox-Hunter, or a Country Justice; the Younger Brother being put to his Shifts, having no Inheritance to depend upon, by plying to his Studies hard at Home, and accomplishing himself by Travels abroad, oftentimes, either by Arts or Arms, raises himself to a conspicuous Pitch of Honour, and so becomes much the better Gentleman; for it is Manners makes a Man, which was the usual Motto of William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester, Founder of the College there, and New College at Oxford, inscribed on the Places of his Founding.

He growing very rich, would at last sell none of his Works, but gave them away, saying, He did not know how to set a Price upon them equal to their Value. He painted a Bunch of Grapes so to the Life, that the Birds came and peck'd them; and afterwards having painted a Boy holding a Bunch of Grapes, which the Birds also flew to and peck'd, he was angry, and ingenuously confessed that his Work was not complete, in that if he had drawn the Boy as well as he had done the Grapes, the Birds would have been afraid of him. And having disputed with Parrhasius, which was the best painter, Parrhasius painted a Curtain so ingeniously, that Zeuxis taking it for a real one which hid the Antagonist's Work, desired it might be drawn, that he

The Sun goes about this Circle once every Year, and the Moon once a Month, and in the Middle of it is the Ecliptick Line, from which the Sun never departs; but the Moon and Planets wander up and down for the Space of eight Degrees, and sometimes more in both.

The Frigid or Frozen ZONES [so called of Frigidus, L. i. e. exceeding cold; because, being extremely remote from the Sun's Course in the Eccliptick, they partake of but little of its Heat] are those comprehended between the Pole and the Polar Circle; therefore one must be towards the North, and the other towards the South. The Frozen or Frigid Zone towards the North, lying between the North Polar Circle and the North Pole, contains Part of Iceland and Norway, Lapland, Finnmark, Samoseda, Nova Zembla, Greenland, and some other Parts of North America; the Frigid Zone towards the South, lying between the South Polar Circle and the South Pole, is not yet known, whether it be Land or Water.

The Temperate ZONES owe their Name and Advantage to their Situation between the Torrid and the two Frigid Zones; the one to the North Side of the Equator, between the Arctick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Cancer, in which we live, is called the Northern; and the other between the Antartick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Capricorn, is called the Southern; each of them taking up 42 Degrees, or about 2580 Miles in Breadth.

The Torrid ZONE [so called of Torridus, L. i. e. parching or burning; because under the Sun's Road, the Beams fall directly on it, and continually cause so excessive an Heat, that the Ancients thought it uninhabitable] is bounded by the Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn, lies in the Middle of the two Temperate Zones, and is divided by the Equator into two equal Parts, the one Northern, and the other Southern; its Breadth being 47 Degrees, or about 2820 Miles.
